SOME OF WHAT'S INSIDE FALL 2007

10 BRIEF HISTORY OF DWENGER HALL

Dwenger Hall has kept a sentinel at SJC for nearly a century. Countless generations of Pumas have wondered of the tales the building would tell if only its walls could talk. Read on as Brian Bugajski '05, having recently used Dwenger Hall as the subject of his historic preservation thesis, unravels the threads of Dwenger's long existence.

16 RENOVATING SJC'S ATHLETIC FACILITIES FOR THE FUTURE

The definition of a Puma is deeply intertwined with the SJC experience with nearly half the current residential students registered as varsity athletes. Athletics are a vital part of Saint Joseph's College and play an integral role in the 21st Century Campaign renovations.

18 FACULTY MEMBERS MAKE TRACKS IN CHINA

The People's Republic of China is an international powerhouse full of unique cultural experiences and spectacular economic growth. Saint Joseph's College professors traveled to the ever-changing country this summer during a twelve-day, four-city tour designed to enhance the College's intercultural curriculum.

From the Alumni Board President

Greeting the World Fresh-Faced and Smiling

In early October, Kris Costa Sakelarlis '82, the Alumni Executive Board Vice President for Academics, Recruitment, and Placement, helped organize an Alumni/Student Networking Reception for current Saint Joseph's students and alumni from Northwest Indiana. I was able to attend along with Dr. and Mrs. Mills, four members of the Alumni Association Board of Directors, several College staff, and about a dozen current students.

The idea, according to Kris, was to offer an opportunity for students to meet, interact, and network with alumni. After the alumni and staff introduced themselves, Donna Brody, Director of the Career Development Center, asked the students to introduce themselves, mentioning their major area of study as well as their career plans. Each of the students acquitted themselves extraordinarily well, despite their mild discomfort at speaking in front of strangers. Each of them expressed their hopes for what they might achieve after graduation.

For our part, the alumni offered encouragement and a bit of advice; namely, that life, circumstances, and opportunities have a way of playing havoc with even our best-laid plans. We cautioned that though their majors might be the career paths that they currently intend to follow, they will be well prepared to make the most of whatever the working world may offer and demand.

I have to admit that I did feel somewhat "disconnected" with the students, all of whom were younger than our youngest child who graduated in 2004. When several of them named teaching as their intended career, I really felt out of place. As an Accounting major, I never had any hopes or prospects for teaching. What advice could I offer to an Education major?

When one of the senior Education majors approached me, I wondered what she might ask of me. At first we "small-talked" about her great uncle who attended Saint Joseph's in the 1950s. As we chatted further, I saw bright eyes, a pleasant smile, and an eagerness to face the world. I soon felt that no matter what I might say - even in a negative manner - would not discourage this soon-to-be newly-minted Puma from becoming the very best teacher that she could ever hope to be.

I guess I really didn't have to offer any advice. Instead, I hearken back to the title of a long-ago song from the rock band The Who: "The Kids Are Alright"!

Program of Church Music and Liturgy

Represented at National Convention

The Rensselaer Program of Church Music and Liturgy of Saint Joseph's College was well-represented at the national convention of the National Association of Pastoral Musicians, held at the Indianapolis Convention Center in July. The gathering attracted more than 3,000 liturgists and musicians from around the country. Current student Kathy Muller of Indianapolis and Julie Males '03, Director of the Office of Worship and Liturgy for the Diocese of Lafayette, served on the convention planning team, and three current students were awarded scholarships from NPM this year: Patricia Fointno-Dawson, Robert Noble, and Ronald Vanasden.

The 2007 Summer Chorus, comprised of current students and faculty, performed at the convention under the baton of SJC Assistant Professor of Music and Choir Director Todd Samra, who teaches voice and conducting during the summer semester. Organ instructor Jill Nennmann served as the accompanist. A number of choristers participated in the evening hymn festival led by well-known Indiana composer Robert Hobby, the subject of Samra's doctoral dissertation at Ball State University.

The Rensselaer Program also was present in the exhibit hall, where its booth attracted visits from a steady stream of alumni, prospective students, and friends of the 47-year-old degree program. Ary Nelson '02, Program Coordinator, and Director Steve Janco were on hand to greet visitors and provide information about summer degree programs and continuing education offerings. Many alumni were able to point out their pictures in photos dating back to the beginning of the program, begun by Rev. Lawrence Heiman, C.P.P.S. '40.

A number of recent alumni offered workshops at the event, including Anna Belle O'Shea '05, who led a clinic for flutists along with Denise LaGigla. Both collaborated on a recently released book, The Liturgical Flutist, published by G.I.A. Publications, Inc., in 2005. Nancy Deacon '02 led a workshop on the purchasing and maintaining of parish pianos. Deacon recently assumed the position of Director of Music at Blessed Sacrament Cathedral in Detroit, Michigan. Composer Carey Landry led a workshop on the needs of part-time parish musicians. John Kubinieć '83 helped to lead a showcase of new music by Oxford University Press.

Current summer faculty also contributed to the convention through numerous talks and workshops. Edward Foley, Capuchin, gave one of the prestigious Hovda Lectures. Janco presented a workshop on the Eucharistic Prayer, and Sr. Joyce Ann Zimmerman, C.P.P.S. led two workshops about devotions and Eucharistic adoration. Rev. Anthony Ruff, O.S.B., new leader of the Rensselaer Gregorian Chant Institute, led a chant intensive at the convention. Ruff, a monk of St. John's Abbey in Collegeville, Minnesota, is also chaplain of the National Catholic Youth Choir, which performed at the convention. Rev. Richard Fragomeni's new book, In Shining Splendor: Easter Season Meditations on the Exsultet, attracted a great deal of attention at the booth of World Library Publications, the music and liturgy division of J.S. Paluch Co., Inc., owned by SJC alumni Bill '75 and Mary Lou (Paluch) Rafferty '76.

Puma '08 Profile

Maggie
Broderick

History major Margaret “Maggie” Broderick ‘08 truly exemplifies the SJC motto “Involved For Life.” A native of Palos Heights, Illinois, Broderick lived a childhood filled with SJC football games and events, fueled by her proud alumnus father, Michael ‘71. When the time came to pursue higher education, Broderick decided that she wanted a college without a high number of teaching assistants or tests in which students use their social security numbers as identification. “Education is so much more personal for me,” she said.

Broderick realized her desire to attend SJC during a visit to the College, in one defining moment in a class she was observing, taught by Associate Professor of Education Dr. Tom Ryan ‘70. Although the semester was still young, Ryan knew each student by name. He also knew each Puma’s major and had tailored project assignments based on specific academic choices.

She then began her journey as a student of Saint Joseph’s College. “SJC helped me become who I want to be,” she said. “I have been given the opportunity to know what I’m interested in, and not only academically. I got involved, and one thing leads to another here. It’s been a great ride so far, and I’ve been able to know all the hard work that goes into running an institution.”

One of her biggest responsibilities at SJC is serving as the Student Association president after getting involved during the second semester of her freshman year as a senator. The experience has helped her learn strategic planning and budgeting as well as how to speak to people on a professional level.

In addition to being the Student Association president and continually taking an overload of classes, Broderick is a member of the Alpha Lambda Delta, Delta Epsilon Sigma, and Phi Alpha Theta honor societies. She also sits on the local board of directors as the SJC representative for Habitat for Humanity of Jasper County and serves as the chairperson of the Social Welfare Committee.

Broderick credits SJC with cultivating her greatest achievement - a better-defined sense of self. "I have no fear of standing up by myself for issues I believe in and to be content with being the lone voice," she said. "SJC has given me the ability to speak, a great conviction for human dignity, and has really helped me decide I want to help people for the rest of my life."

Broderick also works to improve the lives of her peers, serving as a voting member of the Student Life Committee and Academic Cabinet, a student representative for the Faculty Assembly, student director for the Alumni Board of Directors, student trustee for the Board of Trustees, chairperson of the Food Committee, senior class vice president, president of the College Democrats, and President and Treasurer of Phi Alpha Theta. Additionally, she works as a tutor, Freshman Leader, and intern for the Office of Admissions.

In May 2006, she participated in a trip to South America with SJC's chapter of Habitat for Humanity and plans to journey to Guatemala in May of 2008. Broderick wishes to continue her work with Habitat for Humanity after graduation as well as apply for the Peace Corps and then pursue a career in special education, secondary education, or special services, such as administrative policy.

"I've definitely learned how to communicate very well from professors, administrators, and my peers," said Broderick. "I also have the ability to apply what I've learned, be it curriculum theory, economic theory, or philosophies from the Core Program. I've been fortunate enough to have professors who stress application and synthesis and creating my own problem-solving solutions. From the Core Program, I also have a better understanding of how I'm going to survive in the world, with a better understanding of application for real life situations than most people who did not attend SJC. It's your world. These are your four years, and it is up to you to shape them."

Undergraduate Business Opportunities and Resources Abound at SJC

It's a tradition at Saint Joseph's College to sponsor various career and alumni networking events, aiding interested students in forging connections for possible future employment. In past years, these networking events have been specific to students' majors, but this year, for the first time ever, the College offered an opportunity for upperclassmen in all major fields of study to network with SJC alumni. Patterned after the Business Network receptions hosted by SJC's Business Administration Department, the Alumni/Student Networking Reception took place at the Radisson Hotel in Merrillville, Indiana, in October.

Sponsored in conjunction with the College's Career Development Center, fifteen alumni were present to mix and mingle with the twelve student participants. "It was a perfect ratio of students to alumni," said Vice President for Institutional Advancement and Marketing and event participant Maureen Egan '90. "What these students seemed to appreciate most was the advice and conversation outside of their majors and intended careers."

Seeing a need to provide more opportunities and possibilities to Pumas, the Networking Reception was conceptualized by Hammond, Indiana, native Kris Costa Sakelarlis '82, who serves on the Alumni Board Executive Committee as the Vice President for Academics, Recruitment, and Placement. "The SJC Alumni Board is continuously seeking ways to be of service to the College," she began. "Informal alumni networking events give the alumni the opportunity to stay in contact with each other and the College, while giving current SJC students a chance to discover and learn of the many career possibilities that await them after graduation."

New Career Closet at Saint Joseph's College Dresses Students for Success

It may not be a hot new boutique with the latest in campus fashions, but Saint Joseph's College students now have the opportunity to "shop" in the new Career Closet located in the College's Career Development Center on the second floor of the Halleck Student Center. The Career Closet was instituted this year to give students access to the professional attire they will need for interviews, networking events, and career fairs.

So far, SJC faculty and staff members have made many donations of gently used clothing items, including men's and women's suits, slacks, skirts, blazers, suit coats, shirts, blouses, ties, shoes, and purses in a variety of sizes.

To "shop" in the Career Closet, students can make an appointment in the Career Development Center. Private fitting rooms are available, and each student is able to choose one complete outfit. There is no charge for clothing, and students are free to keep their new outfits.

Director of the Career Development Center Donna Brody has come across several instances during her tenure at SJC in which students participating in interviews and mock interviews would have benefited from an opportunity to visit the Closet. "We've had several students take advantage of this service so far, and I expect many more will be visiting when other Career Development Center activities start coming up," she said. Brody believes the Closet will be useful not only to interview-bound students, but also to those individuals who need to attend other professional academic events, such as an internship or practicum requirement.

Alumni interested in donating gently used business clothing items should contact Brody at (219) 866-6188.

Celebrate

the 21st Century Campaign

with Saint Joseph's College

With less than one year left in the College's 21st Century Campaign: Preserving Tradition...Securing Our Future, the Campaign team is busy planning events to market the mission of Saint Joseph's College. The summer months were full of receptions, the College having sponsored three events in the Midwest in August and one in September, as well as hosted a VIP Tent at all the College's home football games.

On August 13, the Campaign team promoted an exclusive event at the Museum of Science and Industry in Chicago, Illinois, featuring Dr. Neal Haskell, Associate Professor of Biology, entomologist, and crime scene investigator. He led the group of Pumas through the Museum's CSI exhibit and shared an in-depth presentation with guests during an after-hours reception. Additionally, President Ernest and Liz Mills, along with members of the Campaign team, traveled to Toledo and Cleveland, Ohio, on August 26, enlisting the help of The Most Reverend Albert H. Ottenweller '36 and Reverend Ken Schnipke, C.P.P.S. '84 to serve as Mass concelebrants at the Toledo reception.

September 8 and 22 marked SJC's first home football games of the 2007-08 academic year, and the Campaign team was there to provide VIP benefits to supporters of the endeavor. September 8's game against the Wayne State Warriors served as an expression of appreciation for the passionate support of the College by faculty and staff. Since the onset of the Campaign in June 2005, SJC faculty and staff have contributed a total of $313,793.77 in gifts and pledges. On September 22, the Pumas went up against the Greyhounds of the University of Indianapolis while SJC Fellows, as well as other friends of the College, enjoyed their VIP status from the exclusive tent. The VIP Tent was also present at the October 6 and November 3 and 10 home games to honor supporters and prospects of the Capital Campaign, as well as on October 20 in recognition of the Class of 1957's 50th reunion.

Additionally, the Campaign team sponsored an exclusive evening at the NCAA Hall of Champions in Indianapolis, Indiana, on September 22. The event featured a museum after-hours reception as well as admission to all exhibits. Speakers at the program included President Mills and Jim Naumovich, Commissioner of the Great Lakes Valley Conference. Hall of Champions staff provided a brief history of the building and its many features, then turned the group loose to roam the premises on their own. Guests enjoyed historical exhibits, unique architecture and statues, and a plethora of interactive games of skill and perseverance.

Future events and receptions are in the work; stay up to date with the Campaign tour by visiting <http://alumni.saintjoe.edu>; for more information about the Campaign itself, visit www.saintjoe.edu/21cc.

The History of Dwenger Hall

On a campus of rich history such as Saint Joseph's College, many parts of the whole are subject to grandiose speculation. The historic and mysterious Dwenger Hall stands proudly amid modern campus facilities, keeping watch as students pass before it every day wondering of its secrets. Students of the past and present might be surprised to know that all the concrete blocks used in the building's construction were hand-made on campus and include four decorative courses of blocks featuring a grapevine design that is unique to the building. The greater campus population may not be aware that a professor's entire library remains stagnant in the basement of the building, waiting patiently for the return of its owner.

For nearly a century, countless generations of Pumas have glanced up at the structure's windows – sometimes occupied, sometimes vacant – and dreamed of the tales the building would tell if its walls could only talk. Read on as Brian Bugajski '05, having recently used Dwenger Hall as the subject of his historic preservation thesis, unravels the threads of Dwenger's long existence.

When construction began on Dwenger Hall during the summer of 1907, Saint Joseph's College was a junior college with four brick buildings, three frame buildings, a large dairy barn, and a student enrollment of less than two hundred. Dwenger Hall is the only one of those original elements surviving today. The other buildings have burned, fallen, or been torn down. The faculty, staff, and students present during those early years of the College have died. Dwenger Hall is the only tangible link to the earliest history of the campus.

In July of 1907, the Provincial Council of the Missionaries of the Precious Blood allocated $7,000 for the construction of an infirmary at the campus. Rev. Augustine Seifert, C.P.P.S., the first president of the College, designed and drew plans for the construction of the new building. The production of the concrete block to be used in its construction was begun shortly after the plans were completed. By June 1907, the seminarians and brothers of the C.P.P.S. had made approximately 5,000 decorative concrete blocks. The decorative rock-face of the concrete blocks suggest that they were most likely made with one of the hand-operated block-making machines that were made popular by the Sears and Roebuck Company in the early twentieth century. Dwenger is the only building on campus to be designed and constructed by Saint Joseph's College faculty and students. The concrete block building received the name Dwenger Hall in honor of the late Bishop Joseph Dwenger, who had donated the original 320 acres of land for the College and died in 1893.

Dwenger Hall was built under the supervision of Father Seifert and an unnamed contractor. Virtually all the construction was completed by the College seminarians from the summer of 1907 to the spring of 1908. When completed, the building housed the College's medical dispensatory, infirmarian's office, sixteen private rooms, two wards for the sick, and an apartment for the convalescent. The basement was arranged for baths, storage, and a kitchen that serviced the three upper floors with a hand-operated dumbwaiter, which still exists in the building today. The structure was heated with steam radiators and illuminated with electric lights. Other amenities included an adjoining toilet supplied with hot and cold water for larger rooms and even larger toilet facilities for general use on each floor.

Dwenger Hall, or, as it was commonly called, "the infirmary," was originally staffed by Brother Victor Zuber, C.P.P.S., who had been the College's infirmarian since 1894. "His credentials consisted of a similar assignment in Ohio, where he borrowed books from local doctors and watched as they treated the sick." In addition to his infirmary duty, Brother Victor was also the College arborist and deliveryman, responsible for making trips into town to pick up the campus packages and mail twice a day. When a case required the knowledge of a licensed physician, the College's attending physician Dr. Ira Washburn – based in Rensselaer – made a visit to campus.

There were a number of different flu viruses and various sicknesses that spread about campus during the early years of Dwenger's use; however, the largest epidemic took place during January and February of 1916. The 1916 epidemic was caused by a Scarlet Fever outbreak; the virus was most likely brought back with a student returning from holiday break. On January 19, 1916, in an issue of College Cheer, a campus periodical, an article stated that Dwenger Hall was accommodating over fifty students (1/6 of the student body) with ailments caused by "disagreeable weather." By January 21, 1916, twelve of the fifty patients were diagnosed with Scarlet Fever; Dwenger and all of its inhabitants were placed under a strict quarantine to stop the spread of the virus. Less than two weeks later, over thirty patients within the quarantined premises were reported as having Scarlet Fever. The situation was well above the abilities of Brother Victor and Dr. Washburn, and at that time the Sisters of St. Francis from St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Lafayette, Indiana, assumed charge of the sick. It is unknown if anyone died due to the outbreak.

In 1922, Peter Heimes, a graduate nurse from the Charity Hospital in Cleveland, Ohio, was hired, relieving Brother Victor from his post as the College infirmarian. Heimes was also a graduate of the College and the College's first registered nurse. He assisted Dr. Cecil Johnson, the successor of Dr. Washburn, in caring for the afflicted students of the College until his death in 1948. In 1957, the College hired two female nurses, Nell Harris and Jean Granfield, to assist Dr. Johnson, who had been the attending physician since 1919.

Dwenger Hall's service solely as an infirmary building lasted until the 1938 academic year when it was converted into a freshman dormitory. The building was converted back into a full infirmary in 1941 following the construction of Seifert, Xavier, and Merlini Halls. The infirmary remained in the basement of the building while it was used as a dormitory. This use lasted another forty years until 1981, when the building's use was again converted into a dormitory for one academic year. The building was then converted into faculty offices for the 1982-83 academic year, and the infirmary was moved to the first floor of Schwietermann Hall. Dwenger Hall continued to serve as a faculty office building until 1995 when the Rev. Charles Banet, C.P.P.S. Core Education Center was built. When faculty offices were moved to the new Core Building, the space in Dwenger was used for student organization offices, such as the campus newspaper and the College chapter of Habitat for Humanity. In March 1998, a window was inadvertently left open during the College spring break, causing a pipe to freeze and burst. Several rooms suffered serious damage, and the building was deemed uninhabitable as a result of the burst pipe. The building has remained closed for general use, unheated, and without electricity since 1998.

It's Raining Praise at Saint Joseph's College

Saint Joseph's College is no stranger to the accolades of others. Having been recognized by a number of national organizations for many years, the College has enjoyed the acknowledgment of its peer institutions for the innovative strides it's made in its lifetime. The Princeton Review and U.S. News & World Report, described below, are just two of several distinctions received by SJC. The College has received awards and recognition from other national organizations who believe in the mission and value of an SJC education, such as the Templeton Foundation, who named SJC a "character-building college"; Colleges of Distinction, who recognized the College for excellence in the areas of Engaged Students, Great Teaching, Vibrant Communities, and Successful Outcomes; and Barron's Best Buys in College Education, who recently included Saint Joseph's in the publication's 9th edition.

U.S. News & World Report* Ranks SJC as Top Midwestern College

Saint Joseph's College earned a spot among the Best Midwestern Colleges in the 2008 edition of "America's Best Colleges" by U.S. News & World Report, the nation's leading source of service journalism and news. The exclusive rankings – which this year feature some substantial changes in methodology – were published in the magazine's August 27 issue and on-line at www.usnews.com/colleges.

The annual rankings – in which U.S. News groups schools based on categories created by the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching – provide a resource for parents and students contemplating one of life's most challenging financial decisions.

The Princeton Review Honors SJC as "Best Midwestern College"

The Princeton Review, a company dedicated to assisting students with standardized test preparation and the college selection process, recently included Saint Joseph's College in its annual "Best Midwestern College" listing on www.PrincetonReview.com. SJC is an institution highlighted for the region for the fourth year in a row and is one of 161 schools on the site receiving the "Best in the Midwest" designation.

"The annual update of our 'Best Midwestern College' profiles generates a surge of attention, awareness, and discussion of colleges featured as the best in the nation, from both the news media and the highly coveted audience of parents and students," said Publisher and Editorial Director for The Princeton Review Robert Franek.

SJC Joins National Initiative to Offer Improved Consumer Resources

Until recently, no single objective consumer resource existed to help prospective students choose a college or university that best fits their needs. Saint Joseph's College, having joined hundreds of other private colleges, now offers a solution through a commitment to transparency and accountability. Participation in a new Web-based project called U-CAN (University & College Accountability Network), led by NAICU (The National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities), is one step toward the commitment to offer consumers improved resources.

The Web-based consumer resource celebrated its national launch in late September and now provides easily accessible, comprehensive, and quantifiable data to the public. SJC's profile can be found at www.ucan-network.org by searching for "Saint Joseph's College" in Indiana.

Rather than including reputation surveys or rankings, U-CAN offers students and families free, on-line access to objective and measurable data that's supplemented by targeted hyperlinks to an institution's Web site. Through the initiative, SJC works with other institutions to offer consumers the information they need to make the best college choice.

SJC Welcomes Class of 2011

Jessica Henry '95

The newest class of Pumas didn't let the heat weigh them down as they moved their belongings into campus residence halls on August 16, kicking off the four-day Freshman Orientation weekend. Move-in day began with smiles and helping hands from Puma Movers, a family picnic hosted by the Office of Admissions, and a meet-and-greet with Freshman Advisors and Leaders. Events like the Puma Olympics, Comedy Night, and a live musical performance kept freshmen busy all weekend, allowing little time for homesickness to set in. First-year students wasted no time in becoming acquainted with SJC, as a scavenger hunt carried them all over campus searching buildings and attractions like Cup 'o Joe, the radio station, McHale-Xavier Hall, and the Lourdes Grotto, culminating with an afternoon of casual fun at Lake Banet where professors were waiting to greet their new pupils.

Welcoming continued into the first week of classes with the annual Convocation on August 23, officially kicking-off the 2007-08 academic year. The Convocation featured a special address from keynote speaker Jessica Henry '95, a Communication/Theatre Arts major, as well as speeches from Dean of Freshmen and Associate Professor of Chemistry Anne Gull, and senior History major and Student Association President Maggie Broderick. The Class of 2011 boasts an enrollment of 286 students, pushing SJC's total enrollment for the 2007-08 to nearly 1,100 – the highest it's been in over a decade.

Maureen Egan '90, Vice President of Institutional Advancement and Marketing, has successfully completed her doctoral coursework, comprehensive exams, and dissertation proposal defense. Research interviews were completed by August 31, 2007, to allow for composition of the dissertation's final chapters. Once finished, Egan will receive a Ph.D. from Indiana State University (Terre Haute, Indiana) in Education Administration with an emphasis in Higher Education Leadership.

John Nichols, Professor of Philosophy and National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH) Distinguished Professor, was involved in several projects over the summer that illustrated the high regard that important agencies and other institutions have for how SJC approaches general education: i.e., the College's Core Curriculum. In May and June, he was involved in a faculty workshop held at SJC with the purpose of renewing the faculty's understanding of and commitment to the local "brand" of liberal education. Nichols also assisted Saint Francis University in Loretto, Pennsylvania, in August in helping them "do general education right." He addressed their entire faculty on "21st century cutting-edge ideas on general education" and worked with several of their committees to plan revisions in their programs. Additionally, he has continued his involvement with The Higher Learning Commission of the North Central Association (HLC - SJC's regional accreditor) and has been recruited to assist other institutions in meeting their quality goals. In June, he mentored four other institutions in designing one- or two-year projects for assessing student learning and aids others in making judgments with regard to reaffirmation of accreditation for institutions participating in the HLC's Academic Quality Improvement Program. For more information on Nichols' work with SJC's Continuous Quality Improvement (CQI), see page 15.

Ilicia Sprey, Associate Professor of History, served as the keynote speaker at Purdue University's First Annual History Graduate Student Association, presenting her speech entitled "The Evolution of a Graduate Student into a Historian," or "How the heck am I supposed to get published?!" in April. The summer was a busy one for Sprey, as well, having spent six weeks at the University of Notre Dame in South Bend, Indiana, in June and July participating in the National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH) Summer Seminar on "The Middle East between Rome and Iran: Early Christianity on the Path to Islam." She's also been exploring the publishing world by contributing entries on "mills and milling," "music and instruments," and "roads and bridges" to the Encyclopedia of Society and Culture in the Ancient and Medieval World, published by Facts on File. Her own work, Civilizations of the Near East and Southwest Asia, one of five volumes in a set on the Ancient World, was published by M.E. Sharpe in August.

Todd Samra, Assistant Professor of Music and Choir Director, gave a solo voice recital in September in the Red Skelton Performing Arts Center as part of Vincennes University's concert series. Bernard Sell '92, SJC staff accompanist for the Concert Choir, accompanied Samra on the piano. Works by Johann Sebastian Bach, Gabriel Faure, Claude Debussy, Frederick Delius, and Vaughan Williams were performed.

Continuous Quality Improvement: A Quiet Revolution

The criteria for judging quality in higher education have changed. The change very simply is this: the quality of a college degree is judged no longer on the basis of inputs—size of libraries, number of Ph.D.s, SAT scores of freshmen, etc.—but on outcomes, what students learned. Saint Joseph's College was prominently involved in this change.

The main judges of the quality of degrees are accreditors: regional ones who accredit whole institutions and specialized ones who accredit individual professional programs. Due to the reputation that SJC had earned for its Core Curriculum, the American Association of Colleges and Universities (AACU) recruited Professor of Philosophy John Nichols to direct its national project on 21st century accreditation and assessment.

All six regional accrediting commissions, eight leading higher education associations, and the four largest specialized accreditors (business, engineering, nursing, and teacher training) all worked on Nichols' project. Learning outcomes predictably became the definers of quality, but the more remarkable consensus reached by the group was the prominence they gave to liberal education outcomes.

SJC was clearly ahead in this development, having made collaboration between liberal education (Core) and a major, the distinctive trait of its undergraduate degrees since the 1970s. What the College "took home" from this AACU project was a determination to become more purposeful about this collaboration and to get more systematic about learning outcomes. Alumni with business backgrounds will immediately recognize the letters CQI: Continuous Quality Improvement. The faculty made the commitment to create its own CQI process, and Nichols was put in charge of the operation.

There will be a three-year cycle of program reviews with two academic divisions reporting to the Academic Cabinet each year. The reports must contain data on assessments of student learning and the collaboration of the major with Core, and then provide a list of improvements to be made over the next three years. Clearly, the psychology of CQI—"If you don't find something to improve, you've failed!"—rules this process.

Thus far, a great story, but it gets even better. In the afternoon of October 26th, the SJC Board of Trustees invested around 150 person-hours figuring out how they might exercise appropriate responsibility for academic quality. Boards all over the country customarily spend much time overseeing finances but vanishing little time on academics. Involving SJC Trustees in ensuring academic quality truly once again puts the College at the cutting edge of the quality revolution.

The bottom line? The College's Mission Statement contains a commitment to excellence in liberal education. That commitment is being honored at more than one important level.

Athletics:

Renovating for the Future

For over a century, nearly all Pumas, past and present, have been touched by athletics at Saint Joseph's College, enduring crushing defeats and stunning victories. The definition of a Puma is deeply intertwined with the SJC experience with half the current residential students registered as varsity athletes. SJC competes at the NCAA's highly competitive Division II level of intercollegiate athletics and is also a member of the Great Lakes Valley Conference (GLVC) and Great Lakes Football Conference (GLFC). Numerous student-athletes have been honored with special recognition, such as selections to All-Conference, All-American, and Academic All-American.

The first football team was fielded in 1896, and the first baseball team was formed in 1898, although neither team competed in intercollegiate games until nearly a decade later in 1907. 1905-06 marked the first season for the basketball team, which began competing in intercollegiate games five years later. SJC athletics also included track and field before World War II, but it would not be until 1976 when women were included in Puma athletics with basketball and volleyball teams. The most recent sports to be added to SJC's growing list were women's soccer and women's golf in 1988.

Today there are 18 teams overall: nine men's and nine women's, in addition to numerous co-ed intramurals. This exponential growth has put a strain on the athletic facilities. Worn out from years of use, they can no longer accommodate the spatial demands. However, instead of building new, the transformation included in the 21st Century Campaign: Preserving Tradition...Securing Our Future focuses on renovating the historically-significant facilities.

"Our facilities were not current with our needs," said Sports Information Director Clark Teuscher '00. "We have a larger number of athletes than the facilities were designed for. We needed a major project like this to address everything we have to get done, and the renovations will open the space up and make it more accessible for the entire department. It's about providing our athletes with what they deserve, need, and expect from a school of our size."

Dedicated on December 8, 1941, the Richard F. Scharf Alumni Fieldhouse is undergoing a $2.7 million renovation. Included in the updates are new office facilities, meeting spaces, and a locker room. The back court has also received an entirely new surface, and all lines and insignia have been repainted.

The Hanson Recreational Center, an integral part of the campus since 1986, was also desperately in need of new flooring. Used for numerous teams' indoor workouts as well as serving as a competition arena for intramural sports and the personal fitness of the SJC community, the playing court has been replaced.

Alumni Stadium, known as Saint Joseph's Field until its rededication in 1993, has perhaps undergone the most noticeable renovation to date. The playing area for the century-old SJC tradition warranted a $700,000 transformation.

The band now performs from their own private bleachers while the home fans enjoy new seating, including a section of specialized chairback seats for added comfort. The formerly hazardous ascent to the press box has also received improved access, and the entire field's chain link and barbed wire fencing has been replaced with a sleek new enclosure.

"The whole look of the athletic department is going to be totally different and up to speed with everyone else," said Head Football Coach Lou Esposito. "I think it's been a long time overdue for the renovations, but money is the key, and that's where we still need a little bit of help. Athletics is the highlight of some of these students' lives. All those alumni and people that have been here must have had a good time at SJC and had many enjoyable memories. If you could help make someone else's memories at SJC better, wouldn't you do it? By donating, that's exactly what you'd be doing."

Due to spatial limitations, the football players are unable to meet as a team in their current locker room. They have resorted to the Shen and Courtney Auditoriums in the Rev. Charles Banet, C.P.P.S. Core Education Center and the Fieldhouse's back court on game days. With the renovated locker area, Esposito will now be able to address his entire team in a private space. All the coaches will have access to more meeting rooms with added office areas, and the renovations will help to impress and entice new athletic recruits.

"We're at a level where you have to recruit with facilities, but right now we show the new recruits the facilities as little as possible," said Esposito. "However, with the new Rec Center floor, offices, and locker room, we can be proud to show off our resources. We'll be comparable now to other schools."

Whether a participant on the fields or a fan in the stands, everyone can enjoy the updates. The athletic renovations serve to ensure the future of Puma tradition for the next century.

"With the renovations, it's like night and day," said Esposito. "Now we can say this is our place; this is what builds all that pride to be a Puma."

An International Connection: SJC Faculty Forge New Paths in the People's Republic of China

From product safety concerns to food recalls to spectacular economic growth, it is difficult for Americans to pass a day without encountering China in the news. Recognizing this importance of China both now and long into the future, seven Saint Joseph's College professors encountered the country live this summer during a twelve-day, four-city tour designed to enhance the College's intercultural curriculum.

What the group saw most as they traveled was change. "Everywhere we traveled we noticed huge building projects," said Fred Berger, Associate Professor of Communication and Director of Television at the College. China's cities are packed with parades of cement trucks, skylines filled with construction cranes, and small villages of temporary housing for workers. By some estimates, one-third of the world's construction cranes are in Chinese cities.

"Infrastructure is being improved throughout the country, especially in the urban areas," Berger continued. "And there is a great deal of pride in these changes the country is making. This is nowhere more evident than in the ramp up for the 2008 Summer Olympics. The games will be a true world stage for China."

Just as obvious as the change sweeping through the country was its impact on some who couldn't keep up or adjust. When Professor of English Charles Kerlin first looked out the window of his hotel room in Beijing, he was shocked at the scene: "It was squalor and a rundown series of tiny connected buildings with tin and fiberboard roofs held in place by bricks to keep the rain out of the rooms and to keep them from blowing away."

Kerlin's room overlooked the remains of a traditional Chinese neighborhood called a hutong. Such neighborhoods in urban areas are being dismantled quickly to make room for development of modern office and residential structures. More than two thirds of Beijing's once 3,000 hutongs, some of them hundreds of years old, have been destroyed.

Despite what appeared like squalor, Kerlin also noted during his days in Beijing that the neighborhood below him was vibrant and lively – people heading to work, playing with children, gossiping in groups, walking dogs, and washing their laundry each morning outside the small homes. "That is the first idea about China I'd like to convey to students," he remarked. "Even in the heart of Beijing with its seventeen million people, even with its frantic preparations for the 2008 Olympics, there is still, right outside a downtown hotel window, another older way of life."

In Hong Kong, where the tour began, the professors met with Martin Lee, founding chairman of the Democratic Party of Hong Kong and a long-time member of its Legislative Council. An outspoken advocate of full democracy for the former British colony, Lee spent more than an hour discussing his insider view of the nuances of Hong Kong and Chinese politics.

For Jody Taylor-Watkins, an Assistant Professor and Director of Core 7 (the specific class of SJC's Core Program that deals with China), the conversation with Lee was a highlight of the trip. "The visit with Martin Lee actually changed the way I will talk about human rights with students," Taylor-Watkins said. Lee argued for a universal concept of human rights, rather than one dependent on culture, a view the Chinese government has promoted. Lee's passion for the argument "was a reminder that what the People's Republic of China claims as its standard for human rights may well not be shared by some substantial part of the population," Taylor-Watkins noted.

In addition to political discussions and academia, the group of professors toured the Forbidden City, the Summer Palace, Shanghai's Bund waterfront, and the terra cotta soldiers standing in their shallow graves outside Xian. Of course, they took in the Great Wall, too.

"In a lot of ways, China has done a good job preserving much of its past," commented Michael Oakes, Associate Professor of Economics and Finance. "Just as Europe offers up its cathedrals, museums, and old-world charm, China gives you its temples, its once Imperial magnificence, and architecture and color worth seeing up close."

Away from the tourist spots, though, it was sometimes hard for the group to imagine "China" as Americans typically visualize it. Taylor-Watkins explained, "I was surprised at how much Chinese cities like Shanghai, Beijing, and Hong Kong 'looked like' Western cities. I'm talking about the extent to which these cities look like modern Western cities, with KFC and McDonalds and designer clothing stores and auto showrooms, many for very pricey brands."

"Of course, from our studies I knew that these things existed in China," she continued. "It is another matter to see them with your own eyes and to think 'If these signs were all in English, I could almost imagine this as a lot of cities in America.'"

The group of professors saw first-hand that as the modern city continues its political and economic rise, the potential for conflict with peoples elsewhere rises, as well. Its economic demands alone bring the country and its policies in touch with people and situations unfamiliar to it just two decades ago.

Troubles in Sudan, with which China has developed strong ties to help meet its growing energy needs, are a case in point. The Sudanese government brutalizes its people and has raised outrage across the world. "Yet China, with its growing energy needs and natural interest in Sudan's resources, has not demonstrated the concern that other countries have about the situation there," according to Taylor-Watkins. "I can see how governments like that of Sudan, when looking around for customers for its oil, would find China a better bargain than Western nations, who are more likely to voice opposition to the brutality going on there."

"Where does that leave the Western world, with our own insatiable demand for oil and other resources?" Taylor-Watkins questioned. "Are we going to have to compromise our own principles in order to compete with China?"

Certainly one key to answering these kinds of questions is helping decision-makers gain a better understanding of China and the Chinese people. Thus is the need for intercultural studies at Saint Joseph's College. As part of its nationally-renowned Core Curriculum, Saint Joseph's College requires all juniors to complete two courses on intercultural studies. The curriculum integrates study of a country's culture with politics, history, literature, art, and economics.

"It is impossible to ignore the role of China in shaping so much about our political and economic future," said Oakes. "Experiencing the country and its people firsthand will have a real impact on the character and quality of our classrooms."

Pension Protection Act Benefits SJC

This year we have an unusual opportunity to express support for the work of Saint Joseph's College. Congress has, just as it did once before in 2006, given individuals over 70 ½ who have invested in IRAs or other qualified retirement plans (such as 401(k)s, 403(b)s, or SEPs), the ability to make a tax-free gift directly from those plans. Many SJC alumni took advantage of this opening last year, and a number have already signaled their intent to repeat their IRA transfer gifts again before the end of 2007, when the opportunity expires.

Those friends of Saint Joseph's College who make a gift from an IRA also receive unique tax advantages. As you know, at age 70 ½ you must begin to take distributions out of any IRA; a gift to SJC from your IRA this year will count as part of your minimum required distribution. Transferring that distribution to SJC means that you do not have to pay taxes on it. Making a gift from your IRA, thus, can reduce your taxes and enhance the educational experience of another generation of Saint Joseph's College students.

Act now – this opportunity expires December 31, 2007, unless Congress renews the Pension Protection Act provision. You can support the College you love and help give in the most tax-savvy way. To learn how an IRA transfer might benefit you this year, please call or e-mail Maureen Egan '90, Vice President of Institutional Advancement and Marketing, at (800) 227-1898 or mo@saintjoe.edu.

Bob '71

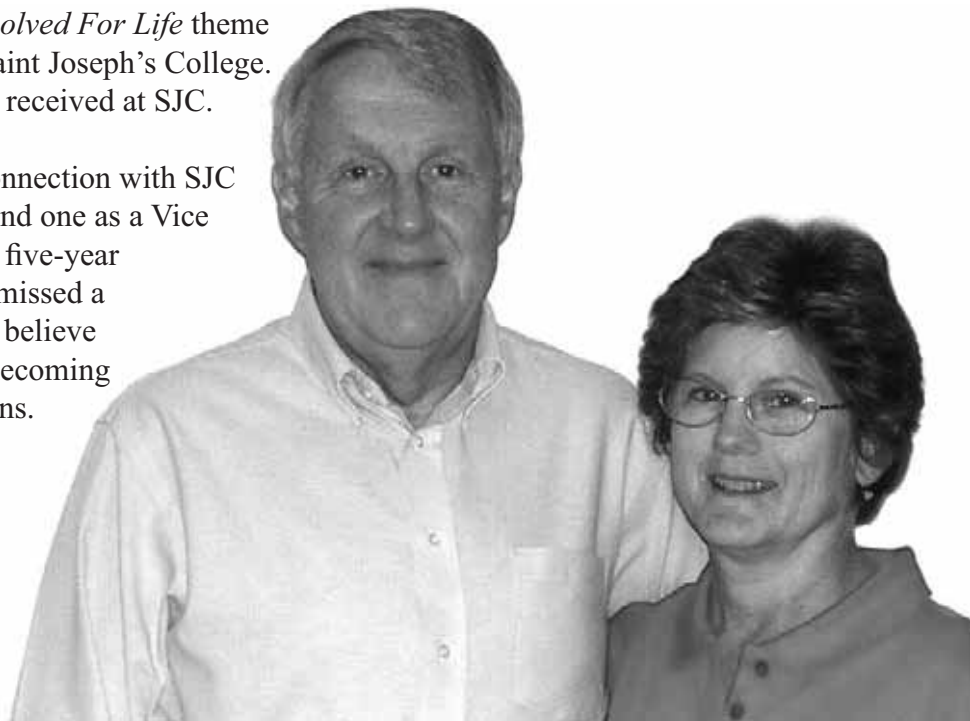

and Jane Neville

Involved For Life at SJC

Bob '71 and Jane Neville have taken the Involved For Life theme and applied it to their lives and support of Saint Joseph's College. Bob appreciates the liberal arts education he received at SJC.

Since graduation, Bob has maintained his connection with SJC by serving two terms on the Alumni Board and one as a Vice President. He and Jane have never missed a five-year Homecoming reunion; in fact, they've only missed a handful of Homecomings in 35 years. They believe their volunteer support and presence at Homecoming is as important as their monetary contributions.

Bob and Jane continue to give back to the College by being part of the Saint Gaspar Society through a bequest in their will. The Society was established to formally recognize individuals like the Nevilles who have chosen to include SJC in their estate plan. When asked about his motivation to be a member of the Society, Bob stated, "I view it as a logical step in what I see as a lifelong continuum of support for Saint Joseph's College."

Along with their estate plan, the Nevilles are Paul Tonner Fellows and contribute what they can each year. They take satisfaction in knowing their gifts combined with similar gifts from alumni have helped keep the College functioning and fulfilling its mission. Bob said, "My wife and I have not always been in a position to contribute as much as we would like, but we always try to do what we can – and we always will."

Named after Saint Gaspar del Bufalo, the founder of the Missionaries of the Precious Blood, Saint Gaspar Society membership is an esteemed distinction recognizing one of the greatest philanthropic tributes to Saint Joseph's College: making provisions to include the College in your estate plans.

How can I become a member of the Saint Gaspar Society? Here are three easy ways, among many, to make a planned gift:

- 1) Include a bequest in your will. Call us for specific bequest language to ensure your intentions are carried out.
- 2) Name SJC the remainder beneficiary of a life income gift. Consider creating a charitable remainder trust or charitable gift annuity.
- 3) Designate SJC as beneficiary for all or a portion of an IRA or other retirement plan asset.

For more information on the Saint Gaspar Society, contact Maureen Egan '90 at (800) 227-1898.

A conversation with

President Mills

What is the status of the 21st

I would like to get an update for our readers on how the 21st Century Campaign is going.

Mills: That would be fine. It is an exciting subject and means a lot to the future of Saint Joseph's College.

Would you talk again about why this particular campaign is so important to the future of Saint Joseph's College?

M: In a nutshell, to be competitive in this new century, [Saint Joe] needs to increase its enrollment, and, to do that, the College must continue to provide excellent programs at an affordable price. That way people will want to enroll and can afford to do so.

The programs are excellent now. Around 96% of the graduates each year are employed or in graduate school within one year of graduation, and we do very well in law and medical school placement. Often 100% are admitted. What needs to change?

M: "Programs" is a big word and programs are not static. Saint Joseph's aims to educate the whole person. This means not only course credits, but salaries to attract and retain good faculty and facilities for learning, living, and recreation. We have been giving faculty and staff an average of 5% raises for the past six years and that must continue. American higher education is very competitive for good talent. Under the title "programs" there is a place at Saint Joseph's College for sports, theatre, good writing, art, public lectures, music, spirited debates, serious research, worship, and good works. In recent years we have renovated our science facilities, Seifert Hall, the dining hall, beautified the Lourdes Grotto, improved technology, and put a new roof on the Chapel.

Now, as part of the 21st Century Campaign, certain key facilities are being renovated including the Hanson Recreation Center, Richard F. Scharf Alumni Fieldhouse, Alumni Stadium, Robinson Memorial Library, Theatre, and Noll and Bennett Halls. The Campaign also aims to increase endowment for scholarships and to fund the care of renovated campus facilities. For readers not familiar with the term "endowment," an endowment is a sum of money from which only the interest income is spent. This interest income supplements tuition and fees and helps to keep costs low while providing funded scholarships for students. All good colleges develop endowment because the costs of education cannot be borne by the average American family.

st Century Campaign?

How is the Campaign going?

M: As of October 31, we have raised in gifts and pledges nearly $9.8 million on a $12.5 million goal. This winter the Kresge Foundation awarded us a $750,000 Challenge Grant. If we successfully complete the Campaign by June 30, 2008, they will award us $750,000.

So we have about $3 million to raise?

M: Yes, and the good news is that pledges count towards the goal - provided they are paid in five years - that is by June 30, 2013.

So, one does not have to pay right away? If I make a pledge by June 30, 2008, it counts towards meeting the Challenge?

M: Yes. This is going to be a critical year for the College. We need to successfully complete this Campaign so we don't have any additional long term debt. I know many of us have important charities we support, but [Saint Joe] is asking its alumni (there is no one else) to get behind their alma mater the final year and make Saint Joseph's College one of their top priorities for giving. There are many alumni who received scholarships that made it possible for them to attend Saint Joseph's. When I visit alumni at some point in the conversation often they say, "If it wasn't for [Saint Joe's]...and then the stories start. Think of it as "payback time." It is time to do for the next generation what the College did for you.

I am sure the Pumas will rise to the occasion. Any parting words?

M: It is easy for all of us to say, "somebody else will do it." For this Campaign to succeed, a lot of Pumas (thousands) are going to have to make it personal and make a financial sacrifice. The time is now and we all are the "somebody else." At the end of the day, Colleges don't have a lock on immortality. We just have to look most recently at the closing of Antioch College (Yellow Springs, Ohio) after 155 years of operation. Fortunately, we are in a considerably better position than Antioch and have a future of much promise. Nevertheless, when the College approaches you for a pledge, please do give it serious consideration. It really is time to help a new generation. The Missionaries of the Precious Blood are not here in large numbers any more to make scholarships available by their "sweat equity." The Pumas have to take up the slack right now - this year - in order for Saint Joseph's College to develop and thus remain competitive in the future.

Thanks, Dr. Mills. We have our work cut out for us.

Jannon Lampley

SJC welcomes Jannon Lampley as women's basketball coach

Jannon Lampley was hired as the eighth head women's basketball coach in Saint Joseph's College history in June.

A native of Urbana, Ohio, Lampley was a part of back-to-back state championship teams at Urbana High School and was named the Ohio Gatorade Player of the Year following her senior season in 1993. She was a four-year letter winner and three-year starter at Purdue University from 1993-97, helping lead the Lady Boilers to three Big Ten Championships and an appearance in the 1994 Final Four.

She was named to the Big Ten All-Freshman Team in 1994, before earning Second Team All-Big Ten honors in 1996. In 1997, she was a Kodak Second Team All-American and the Big Ten Player of the Year, as well as Purdue's Athlete of the Year. She finished her collegiate career with 1,662 points, which currently ranks her seventh on Purdue's all-time scoring list.

Lampley entered the professional ranks with the Columbus (Ohio) Quest of the American Basketball League in the 1997-98 season, then played overseas for teams in France and Poland before a stint with the Orlando Miracle of the WNBA in 2000-01. She played in Spain early in 2002 before returning stateside to play for the Chicago Blaze of the National Women's Basketball League for the 2002-03 season.

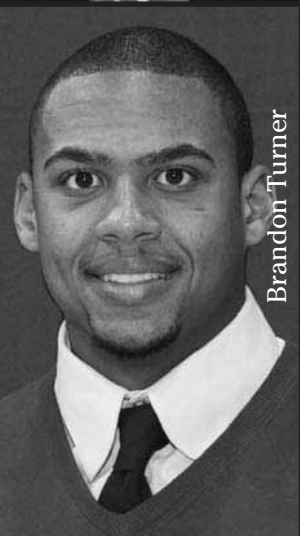

She returned to Purdue from 2003-06 as an assistant coach, during which time the Lady Boilers were a combined 79-20. Purdue won the Big Ten Tournament in 2004 and advanced to the Sweet Sixteen of the NCAA Tournament in 2004 and 2005.

Lampley graduated with a Bachelor of Science degree in Organizational Leadership and Supervision from Purdue in 2003, and is pursuing a Master of Business Administration degree from Florida Metropolitan University.

Lampley and her husband, Kenneth, were married in December of 2005. They reside in Lafayette with their one year-old daughter, Jaylah, and welcomed new daughter Lola to their family in October.

Tom Church

Brandon Turner

New assistant men's and women's basketball coaches added to staff

The SJC men's and women's basketball programs both will have new assistant coaches this year, as Tom Church and Brandon Turner '06 have been added to the men's staff and Kathleen Offer has been named the top women's assistant coach.

Church came to SJC from Hiram, Ohio, where he had been an assistant coach at NCAA Division III Hiram College. The previous two seasons, he was the head boys' coach at Conneaut High School in Conneaut, Ohio.

He is a 2003 graduate of Ashland University, where he was a teammate of SJC head coach Richard Davis for two years and was also coached by Davis for one year. He was a four-year letter winner and two-time Academic All-Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic Conference honoree and was the team's captain as a senior.

Church is a 1998 graduate of Conneaut High School, where he was a First Team All-Ohio selection and Conference Player of the Year Award winner as a senior. He graduated as the school's third all-time leading scorer.

Church graduated with a Bachelor of Science degree in Education from Ashland in 2003, and earned a Master of Education in Administration degree, also from Ashland, in 2006.

Kathleen Offer

Turner was a two-year starter for SJC in the 2003-04 and 2005-06 seasons, averaging 8.7 points and 4.9 rebounds per contest for his career while shooting 52.3 percent from the field. He started all 34 games for the Pumas in 2005-06, helping lead the team to a 31-3 overall record and a Great Lakes Valley Conference championship.

A native of Anderson, Indiana, Turner transferred to SJC from Iowa Central Community College, where he averaged 12 points and 10 rebounds per game on the way to Second Team All-Conference and All-Region honors as a sophomore. Iowa Central was 48-19 in Turner's two years with the program.

Turner graduated from SJC in 2006 with a bachelor's degree in Physical Education.

Offer, a native of Royal Oak, Michigan, is no stranger to SJC, as her father Lou '69, sister Patty '93, and brother Tom '95 are all alumni of the institution.

Offer played collegiately at Yale University in New Haven, Connecticut, from 1992-96, starting at point guard all four years for the Bulldogs. She is Yale's all-time career leader in assists (546) and steals (211), and also still holds the Bulldogs' single-season record for assists (156 in 1994-95). Offer also remains the all-time assist leader in the history of the Ivy League (296 assists in 55 league games).

She was employed in the Sports Information Office at Purdue University from 1996-2006, having been promoted to Associate Sports Information Director in 1998. As the Associate SID, she was responsible for coverage of the women's basketball and men's and women's tennis programs.

For the 2006-07 season, Offer was the varsity assistant girls' basketball coach at Shrine Catholic High School in Royal Oak, where she was involved in all aspects of the program.

Offer graduated from Yale in 1996 with a Bachelor of Arts degree in American Studies.

Phil Schervish '71, a Professor of Social Welfare Policy and Social Justice at Spalding University in Louisville, Kentucky, returned in June from a two-week trip to Israel and Palestine as a member of an Interfaith Peace-Builders delegation. The purpose of this delegation is to educate North American citizens about the region and deepen their understanding of its conflicts. The delegates met with an array of Palestinians and Israelis who shared their observations on the current situation, the effects of United States foreign policy in the region, and the possibilities for a just and sustainable peace. Individual meetings were held with Jeff Halper, recently nominated for a Nobel Peace Prize, and Rami Elhanan, an Israeli whose daughter was killed by a suicide bomber and who currently works for peace and justice with the Parents' Circle. Delegates also met Israeli and Palestinian college students, inhabitants of a Palestinian refugee camp, Israelis who refuse to serve in the military, and Palestinian farmers. They also traveled to the south of Israel to learn about the environmental conditions and meet with Bedouins.

Schervish is the Chair of the Board of Directors of Catholic Charities in Louisville and the Louisville Chapter of the Fellowship of Reconciliation and member of the National Council. He is also an active member of R.E.A.C.H Therapeutic Foster Care Agency, and St. Williams Catholic Parish. Schervish participated in the Interfaith Peace-Builders Delegation in order to learn firsthand about the conditions in the Middle East. Upon his return, he plans to spread his observations throughout the Louisville community which he hopes will help individuals to form opinions and act on this tragic and peace threatening situation.

College Fund Honor Roll of Donors

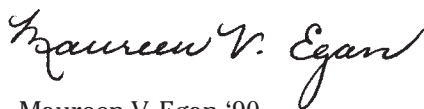

In the pages that follow, you will find the Honor Roll of Donors listing the College Fund supporters from July 1, 2006, through June 30, 2007. We are pleased to report an alumni donor participation rate of 24% for this past fiscal year. For those who have been following this statistic, the rate stayed the same as fiscal year 2005-06, but there were more "lost alumni" found in fiscal year 2006-07 (increasing our denominator of those alumni with a good mailing address). We hope to reach 27% this fiscal year in our quest to climb to the national average of 30% by the year 2012.

Rising up from a 54% donor participation rate in 2005-06 are the Faculty/Staff who delivered a stellar performance of 77% donor participation for fiscal year 2006-07. Congratulations and thank you, loyal colleagues.

One of the biggest challenges in the time of a capital campaign is sustaining support for day-to-day operations through general annual unrestricted giving (i.e., College Fund). Often, annual giving suffers as larger, multi-year pledges are made in support of a capital campaign. While the 21st Century Campaign continues to make great strides in the public phase, it is an honor to inform you that the College Fund exceeded its goal of $1,039,000 (unrestricted) for fiscal year 2006-07. That's what I call "peaceful coexistence."

The section that follows the Honor Roll of Donors for the College Fund (general annual) is a separate Honor Roll of Donors listing contributors to the 21st Century Campaign (capital campaign). Throughout both of these listings I hope you will take the time to enjoy the photos that chart renovation and construction progress on campus and show you the many Puma activities throughout this past year. If, by our error, your name did not get listed – we offer our apologies and ask that you contact us at (800) 227-1898 or e-mail mo@saintjoe.edu.

What will your legacy be?

Tom Huhn '59 left a lasting legacy at Saint Joseph's College. His establishment of the Thomas J. Huhn Athletic Leadership Scholarship has impacted students from the Fort Wayne, Indiana area since 1986.

You too can create a legacy at SJC. By including the College in your estate plan, you can establish a permanent scholarship or endow a faculty position. You can even honor someone important to you.

An International Connection

Recognizing the importance of The People's Republic of China both now and long into the future, seven Saint Joseph's College professors encountered the country live this summer during a twelve-day, four-city tour designed to enhance the College's intercultural curriculum. Read along as their stories unfold on pages 18-20.
